

Privacy policy

We store, process and use the personal information you give us on this website for the sole purpose of processing your booking request and carrying out the resulting accommodation contract. Data will only be disclosed in accordance with the mandatory regulations. In general, your personal data is used or disclosed to third parties only with your express consent. Our employees are under obligation to respect confidentiality and comply with data protection regulations.

No personal data will be stored simply by accessing this website. Where you are asked to provide personal data that will be stored, we will provide detailed information about the scope and purpose for which the information is stored, as well as possible recipients of the stored data.

When visiting this website, some general information may automatically be stored, such as the type of your web browser, the name of your Internet service provider, the website from which you accessed this website, and in some cases the IP address of your computer. This information is recorded and evaluated for statistical purposes only. The data is recorded anonymously and will not be used to identify users.

The only form of cookies (data segments stored on your computer's hard drive) used by Liebherr are 'session cookies', which are used to store information during the current access session of this website. Liebherr has no access to this information after your access session has ended. Your browser configuration can be changed to prevent the storage of cookies on your hard drive.

If you have any further questions relating to our privacy policy, please contact the person responsible for data protection at Liebherr-International Deutschland GmbH:
